General Motors, CAW ordered to reach new deal

The head of the Canadian Auto Workers says the federal and Ontario governments are forcing the union and General Motors Canada to come up with a new labour agreement by the end of next week in order for the company to get bailout funds.

Ken Lewenza said the governments have set a strict deadline of May 15 for the two sides to reach a new agreement, to replace one that was negotiated in March before the CAW agreed to even bigger concessions with Chrysler.

"If we don't get a deal, the governments will provide no financial support and GM Canada will be liquidated," Lewenza said Thursday.

"Who would ever think that General Motors could possibly be in a position where they could potentially liquidate and potentially have no existence here in Canada? It's quite frightening," he added.

But Ontario Economic Development Minister Michael Bryant said that's a "worst-case scenario" and said he's confident the two parties will be able to reach a deal.

Federal Industry Minister Tony Clement said the choice was clear for GM employees.

"What will not work is if the union heads do not want to be part of the solution. Then the choice of the workers is to have a job that is cost competitive or to have no job at all," Clement said during question period.

Officials won't confirm flu death in Alberta

Federal health officials would not confirm reports Thursday that an elderly woman in northern Alberta with influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, had died.

Federal Health Minister Leona Aglukkaq's spokesperson said it's up to Alberta officials to release information on people in their province.

Alberta Health Minister Ron Leipert was asked about the death Thursday afternoon and said he has no information about it.

The CBC said it was not clear if swine flu was the cause of death or if she had underlying health conditions.

A total of 44 people have died of the flu strain in Mexico and two in the US.

Ontario confirmed seven new cases, bringing the total number of cases in the province to 56.

In total, there are 214 confirmed cases of H1N1 in Canada.

Summit fosters economic ideas

Be bold. Dream big. Cut red tape. Work together.

That was the message from participants at the Greater Toronto Region Economic Summit, convened to come up with a plan to steer the region's economic engine out of the recession and back to prosperity.

"People are looking for some hope, some faith in the future. They're hurting," said Mississauga Mayor Hazel McCallion, co-chair of yesterday's summit. "I think the message from this summit is going to give them some hope."

In an unprecedented gathering at Seneca College's Markham campus, 250 leaders from business, academia, social services, labour and politics brainstormed at the daylong session on how to guide the region to recovery.

The dozens and dozens of suggestions that came out of that will now be studied and considered, with a final action plan expected by the end of the month.

Some ideas were predictable, such as funding for training and apprenticeship programs, reforming the Employment Insurance system, and making it easier for internationally trained professionals to work here. Others were outside the box, such as holding a Dragon's Den–style competition for the brightest minds to tackle an innovation challenge.

Many of the suggestions focused on leveraging the Canadian banking success story amid a global financial meltdown that has catapulted Canada's Big 5 banks into the top 15 in North America and top 35 in the world.

News in brief

COURT The case against a Toronto radio and television broadcaster accused of air rage has been set aside until June 18. Colleen Walsh was charged a month ago after a passenger allegedly became unruly onboard an Air Canada flight from Dublin. The plane was on its way to Toronto March 31 when it was forced to land in St. John's for a medical emergency. Walsh has said she offered to help care for an ill woman, but that an argument had erupted involving her, a crew member and a passenger. The 48-year-old broadcaster was charged with causing a disturbance and mischief. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Councillor wants stores to open up washrooms

Stores that want customers to open their wallets should also be required to open their washrooms, say councillors on Toronto's licensing and standards committee.

The move — which still needs city council approval — flows from the urging of Coun. Howard Moscoe, who chairs the committee. Moscoe has had complaints from constituents about lack of washroom access and said he sympathizes completely.

"I'm getting a bit older, and I can't manage to pass a washroom without using it," Moscoe told the committee.

"I'm getting a bit older, and I can't manage to pass a washroom without using it."
Howard Moscoe

A staff report on the proposal suggests the washrooms need be made available only to "customers," not the public at large. It would be up to retailers to decide who is a customer.

The proposal would require only stores bigger than 3,230 square feet to open their washrooms to customers. Stores that size are already required to provide separate men's and women's washrooms under the Ontario Building Code, he said, so they wouldn't have to build new facilities — just put up signs opening them to clientele as well as store staff. Dhalla called to Commons committee on nanny issue

POLITICS Ruby Dhalla is being called to answer claims of domestic worker abuse before a committee of MPs as the Liberals accuse the Conservatives of "lynch-mob" political tactics.

Dhalla has resigned as Liberal multiculturalism critic and says she'll fight to clear her name after two foreign workers accused her family of mistreatment. She has denied any wrongdoing and says she was not involved in hiring or supervising the workers.

Dhalla said in a statement she is "saddened and troubled" by the claims and has asked the independent ethics commissioner to investigate.

Two caregivers who worked in the Dhalla home in Mississauga last year say they were asked to do extra chores and they had trouble getting paid.

Magdalene Gordo, 31, and Richelyn Tongson, 37, say their passports were also illegally withheld. They had been hired to care for Dhalla's mother, Tavinder. Both caregivers have also been invited to immigration committee hearings as early as next Tuesday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Renew your child-like curiosity at science fair

EVENT For far too long, the world of science has been considered off-limits to everyone lacking a white lab coat and a thick pair of spectacles.

But the nerdy need not be the only ones to enjoy the subject. "Everyone loves science at some level. It is just normally presented in an intimidating manner," says Prof. R.J. Dwayne Miller from the University of Toronto. "We are born scientists. Kids are naturally curious and use the scientific method to try to understand the world around them."

"Everyone loves science at some level. It is just normally presented in an intimidating manner."
Prof. R.J. Dwayne Miller, U of T

It's a sad, but true state of affairs. Fortunately, Miller created a festival to bring his favourite subject to the masses. According to Miller, "Science Rendezvous makes science accessible. It gives people the chance to reconnect with their inherent curiosity."

Saturday, 600-plus volunteers will be involved with more than 200 free events during the second annual Science Rendezvous. Universities and hospitals will offer guided tours and demonstrations of their state-of-the-art research labs. Coffee shops and pubs will host scientific discussion and lectures. Even shopping malls will offer interactive displays.

For 24 hours, the city will be alive with scientific discussion and debate. Some noble scientists will even step back into their youth for the Grown Up Science Fair at The Rivoli.

Thomas Bachelder tests the aging of a barrel of Pinot. The winemaker's Chardonney came in tops in a Quebec magazine wine tasting competition, beating out French and California vintages.

Niagara wine wins by a nose

Taking many a palate by surprise, a Niagara wine has clinched top honours in a taste test sponsored by a Quebec wine magazine.

The editor-in-chief of Cellier wanted to pit French wines against those from California to see if the Golden State would outperform France's famous Bordeaux and Burgundy regions according to a group of Quebec connoisseurs, who tend to fancy wines from the motherland.

SunnySide

The judges selected three French wines for the top spots among 16 Cabernet Sauvignons in a blind taste test, but Marc Chapleau decided to add a little twist to the competition.

Chapleau slipped a Niagara wine along with vintages from Australia and New Zealand into the Chardonnay competition without the judges knowing.

A $37.50 bottle of Niagara's Le Clos Jordanne Claystone Terrace 2005 ended up beating 13 other brands — most of them from France and California.

"It happened that the Niagara wine took the first place which is very surprising and I'm sure they're going to rejoice," Chapleau said. "It's a first ever."

Thomas Bachelder, Le Clos Jordanne's winemaker and vineyard manager, happened to be in Quebec City for a promotional tasting when he saw the article in Cellier's summer edition released Thursday.

"We were shocked," he said in an interview. "We had the wind knocked out of us when we heard." THE CANADIAN PRESS

No suing for SARS, says court

VIRUS Nurses, people who contracted SARS and their families cannot sue the Ontario government over the deadly 2003 outbreak that claimed 44 lives, Ontario's top court ruled Thursday.

Several groups of people attempted to sue the province, alleging the government put economic interests ahead of public safety during the outbreak.

But the Ontario Court of Appeal ruled the claims did not have legal grounds to proceed, and dismissed the lawsuits.

The nurses' claim involved 53 registered nurses in the Toronto area and their families, including the family of Tecla Lin, who died of SARS in July 2003.

They alleged the province failed to provide nurses with timely information and the directives issued to Ontario hospitals were inadequate and exposed nurses to the risk of contracting SARS. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Eighteen members of the University of Saskatchewan's law faculty and 61 of the province's trial lawyers say in an open letter Conservatives should abide by a recent Federal Court ruling that failure to seek Khadr's repatriation goes against principles of fundamental justice. Khadr, now 22, is accused of throwing a hand grenade that killed an American special forces soldier following a four-hour firefight in Afghanistan in July 2002. Harper drops in

PM touts Afghan reconstruction projects

Canada's role in Afghanistan is "transforming" into one more focused on reconstruction and development, Prime Minister Stephen Harper said Thursday during an unannounced visit aimed at rallying the troops and showcasing their mission's shifting priorities.

Harper began a secrecy-shrouded tour of the region almost as soon as his cavernous new C-17 transport plane, the crown jewel in a newly acquired fleet of aircraft performing yeoman's duties in the battle-ravaged desert nation, touched down at Kandahar Airfield.

But unlike past visits, where Harper has travelled to forward battlefield positions to commiserate with Canadian troops, the showpiece this time was the Dahla dam, one of Canada's signature reconstruction projects, in the fertile Arghandab valley.

"We're in the process of transforming our mission so it will focus on reconstruction and development," he later told Canadian soldiers and civilians gathered for the occasion in the main square at the central air base.

"Once completed, the Dahla dam project will provide drinking water to much of the Kandahar region. This project will boost agriculture, and generate 10,000 seasonal jobs and it will build people's confidence in the future." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Almost 90 per cent of Canadians want their troops out of Afghanistan by the scheduled end date in 2011 or before, despite new American commitments to the conflict, a new poll suggests.

Forty per cent of those surveyed in The Canadian Press Harris-Decima poll said the troops should be brought back early, while 46 per cent said they should be withdrawn in July 2011 as approved by Parliament.

Only eight per cent of respondents said Canada should extend its mission in Afghanistan.

Shrimp may supply key insight

ECOSYSTEMS Shrimp can provide valuable insight into broad changes in the marine ecosystem, according to a new study that found the spindly crustaceans serve as canaries in the coal mine when it comes to warming waters and the health of fish stocks.

The research by an international team of scientists and led by Canada showed for the first time how much the heavily harvested Northern shrimp rely on water temperatures and algae blooms for their survival.

Peter Koeller, a Canadian fisheries scientist, said the findings shed light on the complex mating habits of the Pandalus borealis, the shrimp species that makes up one of the world's largest fisheries and sustains an industry worth $500 million a year in the North Atlantic. THE CANADIAN PRESS

ANNIVERSARY It's been a year of ups and downs for Brenda Martin since gaining her freedom after languishing in a Mexican prison for more than two years, and the woman whose plight captured national headlines says she hopes Canadians are now more sympathetic and share her distrust of Mexico's justice system.

Martin had worked as a chef for Alyn Waage, who was fingered as the mastermind of an international pyramid scheme. She said she assumed his enterprise was legit but an investment got her entangled into his legal mess.

Although Prime Minister Stephen Harper called Mexico to discuss the case, he and his government said throughout her ordeal that they had to respect Mexico's sovereignty.

Flu reaches Saskatchewan

Two new infections in woman, teenager described as mild

Flu Outbreak

Saskatchewan joined the list of places with influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, with health officials confirming Thursday the first positive cases in the province.

A teenage girl in the Saskatoon Health Region and a woman in her mid-20s from the Regina area have the virus, said Dr. Moira McKinnon, provincial chief medical health officer.

"Both have mild illnesses, both had vacationed in Mexico and both are well now," said McKinnon. "They don't pose any risk to anyone else at this stage."

Neither the teen nor the woman required hospitalization.

The woman isolated herself, say officials with the Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region. Dr. Johnmark Opondo, the deputy medical health officer in Saskatoon, says the teenage girl "was not in school while she was symptomatic."

"I think if there was any exposure, it may have been very minimal or mild. However ... we will definitely be talking with the school and the school board," said Opondo.

"But we don't believe there was a lot of exposure in the school."

Opondo said a couple of the teen's family members did have flu symptoms, but "they've all recovered now so there isn't an indication for doing any more testing."

Inquiry judge astounded by lobby fees for Bear Head

HEARING The judge heading a public inquiry into the Mulroney-Schreiber affair has added his voice to a chorus of disbelief over the millions in lobbying fees shelled out by a German firm hoping to do business in Canada.

Justice Jeffrey Oliphant, in comments from the bench Thursday, characterized a tentative agreement reached by Thyssen AG with the federal government in 1988 as legally "meaningless" and wondered why anyone would pay for the privilege of signing it.

At issue was the so-called Bear Head project, in which Thyssen proposed to set up a plant in Cape Breton to build and export armoured military vehicles.

The project has been the main focus of the inquiry into financial dealings between former Conservative prime minister Brian Mulroney and businessman Karlheinz Schreiber.

Flu pandemic could affect 2 billion: WHO

The World Health Organization said Thursday up to two billion people could be infected by influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, if the outbreak turns into a pandemic that typically lasts two years.

WHO flu chief Keiji Fukuda said the number wasn't a prediction, but that experience with flu pandemics showed one-third of the world's population gets infected.

Flu Outbreak

Fukuda said it is impossible now to say whether the outbreak will turn into a pandemic or whether it would be a mild or severe strain of influenza.

People react differently to the flu. Some younger people in the Southern Hemisphere may be more vulnerable because of malnourishment, war, HIV infections and other factors, Fukuda said. This means a mild outbreak in wealthier countries can be "quite severe in its impact in the developing world," he said.

The WHO said the number of confirmed swine flu cases around the world has surpassed 2,000.

Captured video shows fighters using civilians

SRI LANKA Video footage captured from Sri Lanka's Tamil Tigers showed their fighters forcing civilians to assist their war effort and depicted one insurgent in street clothes firing a heavy machine-gun, the military said Thursday.

The government said the footage, posted on the Defence Ministry website, proves the rebels have been putting civilians in the line of fire and have shed their military uniforms so they would be mistaken for non-combatants themselves if killed.

Pakistanis flee Taliban-controlled Swat

Thousands of terrified Pakistanis dodged Taliban roadblocks to flee fighting Thursday between the army and insurgents, streaming into refugee camps and crowding hospitals with their fatigued and hungry children.

According to the United Nations, tens of thousands have fled their homes in recent days from the Swat Valley where a militant-government peace pact collapsed this week.

45,000

The number of people the UN says have fled the latest fighting. The government fears up to 500,000 could be forced from their homes.

Several thousand men, women and children, most riding cars, buses and tractors, but some of them on foot, took advantage of an easing in the army curfew to pour through Swat's main town, Mingora, in search of safety.

The military claimed to have killed 80 militants in Swat and the neighbouring Buner region Wednesday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. jobless drop indicates layoffs may have peaked

BENEFITS New applications for jobless benefits plunged to the lowest level in 14 weeks, a possible sign that the massive wave of layoffs has peaked. Still, the number of unemployed workers in the United States getting benefits climbed to a new record.

Retail results also improved as Wal-Mart Stores and other stores reported April sales figures that beat expectations. Analysts acknowledged the positive economic signals but cautioned that any recovery will be subdued as long as unemployment stays high.

The Labor Department reported the number of newly laid-off workers applying for benefits dropped to 601,000 last week. That was far better than the rise to 635,000 claims that economists expected.

But the total number of people receiving jobless benefits climbed to 6.35 million, a 14th straight record. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cashing in on Cuba's opportunities

InBusiness

Charles Davies

To visit Cuba is literally to experience time travel. Outside the self-contained and sanitized resorts from which few Canadians venture, Cuba is stranded in the 1950s — a vista of decaying towns and cities, large stretches of unused countryside, hammerhead oil wells, clutches of workers at bus stops, crumbling highways, and innumerable classic cars, many belching apocalyptic clouds of exhaust. The only advertisements are revolutionary slogans painted on walls. And everywhere there's a constant police presence, a none-too-subtle reminder that Cuba remains a repressive state.

If the country has barely progressed since Fidel Castro took over on Jan. 1, 1959, the recent past has hardly been kinder. Thanks to the global recession, external financing for the island has dried up, falling commodity prices have cut into export revenues for key items like nickel, food imports are becoming more costly, and tourism — now a roughly $3-billion-a-year industry — is slowing down.

All this will change, and not just because economic growth will resume. Fidel Castro, 82, and his younger, more pragmatic brother Raul, 77 (who took on the Cuban presidency in 2006 due to Fidel's illness) are literally on their last legs. Equally, U.S. President Barack Obama's conciliatory gestures towards the island — backed by more positive U.S. public opinion about the country — signal that the U.S. embargo that has stifled Cuba's economy for decades may finally be coming to an end. When you ask Cubans about the future, they speak without hesitation of a freer, more entrepreneurial country.

For Canadian companies, Cuba is an enormous business opportunity in the making. Aside from the further potential for tourism development, Cuba literally needs everything — foodstuffs, consumer goods, equipment of every description, and all kinds of infrastructure.

And if U.S. estimates are correct, there's something like five billion barrels of oil and 10 trillion cubic feet of natural gas waiting for exploitation offshore.

But aside from Sherritt International's well-developed nickel mining, oil and gas and electricity operations, corporate Canada seems largely absent. An estimated 85 Canadian firms operate there, but aside from the likes of Sherritt and Labatt Breweries (actually owned by Belgium's InBev S.A.) the rest are mid-sized and smaller companies.

The Harper government's coolness toward Cuba in recent years hasn't helped either. By contrast, sizable U.S. and European companies are already jockeying for position once the door opens on the new Cuba. It's an opportunity that Canada cannot afford to miss.

Veteran financial writer Charles Davies recently spent time in Havana and northern Cuba, visiting sites once frequented by Ernest Hemingway.

Walking comes with its share of inherent danger

UrbanCompass

April Lindgren

metronews.ca/lindgren

There's a lot to love about walking to and from work. But there's also a lot not to love about the footwear women must accept if they want to avoid the ranks of the walking wounded.

It's easy to make a case for walking. It beats going to the gym to exercise and compensates for food indulgences in Toronto, the urban equivalent of a culinary United Nations. Walkers are spared the crush of people on public transit and they do their bit to save the planet from cars that spew pollution. Walking gives you time to think. The case against walking, by comparison, is admittedly frivolous. And it can be summed up in three words: Ugly, expensive shoes.

Shaffu Sharma, a specialist in foot biomechanics and orthotics at the BioPed clinic near Eglinton and Bayview, has little sympathy for footwear fashionistas.

"Look at your foot," she says. "It's wide at the heel and at the front. By the time you design a shoe that feels good, accommodates your five toes and the spread of your foot when you stand up, the shoe has to be wide and the heel has to be blocky to keep you stable."

There are stores that claim to sell attractive shoes that will not cripple after 15 minutes of energetic walking. Experience, however, suggests they are fibbing. A pair of sleek, costly black leather German-made pumps comes to mind. A half-hour into their inaugural walk I had to take a cab.

Sharma, unfortunately, confirms that committed walkers, who choose anything but good quality running shoes, are wasting their money and jeopardizing their foot health.

She conceded during a recent meeting that slingbacks, slides and delicate, strappy sandals are OK to wear once in a while. But then she pointed to several pairs of what can only be described as "practical" shoes for everyday use at home and in the office. Ugly? Yes. Expensive? Yes.

Necessary? "What you have there on your feet are bunions," Sharma noted with brutal honesty. "They are there because of the shoes you've been wearing and there's no way of stopping them from growing now that they've started."

Misery, thy name is Adidas. Size 8.

Bell buys up Virgin Mobile

Bell Canada parent company BCE Inc. has reported a 46 per cent rise in first-quarter net profit to $377 million, and also announced Thursday it is buying the half-interest it does not already own in Virgin Mobile Canada.

Canada's largest telecommunications company said it is paying $142 million in cash for Virgin, which has been running since 2004 on the Bell Mobility network.

Virgin Group chairman Sir Richard Branson said U.K.-based Virgin will continue efforts to build its brand in Canada with entertainment businesses such as Virgin rock festivals and Virgin Radio.

BCE also announced an agreement with Telus under which Telus will distribute Bell satellite TV service in Alberta and British Columbia under the Telus brand.

BCE said its profit improvement was driven in part by a 25 per cent increase in postpaid wireless activations to 35,000.

Total net activations were 30,000, as Bell lost 5,000 prepaid clients.

We control Coyotes: NHL

League seeks dismissal of Phoenix's bankruptcy filing

The National Hockey League says it has been in control of the Phoenix Coyotes franchise since last November and is asking a federal judge to throw out the team's bankruptcy filing.

NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly says Coyotes owner Jerry Moyes signed documents giving control of the team to the league. Daly says the documents specifically prohibit Moyes from taking the franchise into bankruptcy.

Daly spoke after a hearing in U.S. Bankruptcy Court on the franchise's filing for Chapter 11 reorganization on Tuesday. The filing, which came as a surprise to the NHL, includes a plan to sell the team to Canadian businessman Jim Balsillie for US$212.5 million and move it to southern Ontario.

The NHL wants to keep the team in Arizona and says it is in discussions with a prospective ownership group that includes Jerry Reinsdorf, owner of the Chicago White Sox and Chicago Bulls.

ROSS D. FRANKLIN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Phoenix Coyotes owner Jerry Moyes talks to the media Thursday after a hearing in the bankruptcy filing of the Coyotes hockey team and the proposed sale of the team to Jim Balsillie in Phoenix.

NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly said Balsillie's attempt to purchase the struggling franchise is breaking many of the league's rules and may regret his plan of attack.

"He makes his own decisions and he's making a decision that this is the way he wants to get into the National Hockey League. We don't usually like to pick fights, but we end them," Daly told The Canadian Press.

"We don't usually like to pick fights, but we end them."
Bill Daly, NHL deputy commissioner

Daly also suggested that Balsillie will meet a united front at the league's highest level.

"Well certainly to the extent he's attacked virtually every rule that's in existence in the National Hockey League, I don't think the governors will look kindly to the posture he's taken in this proceeding, that's for sure."

Earlier Thursday in Hamilton, representatives of Balsillie and the city met to discuss an agreement over Copps Coliseum should the tycoon succeed in buying the Coyotes and moving them to the Steel City. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FieldofPlay

Scott Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

In case you haven't heard, there's a billionaire trying to buy an NHL franchise and move it to Southern Ontario.

Toronto hockey fans are in a tizzy.

And while it's awesome to see the affection folks in the metropolis have for our icebound obsession, there is so much out there that screams for our attention.

It's true hockey has come to embody much of the Canadian identity, but this fascination with what is essentially a business deal has overshadowed what great sport is really all about.

I'm talking about the wizardry of Sidney Crosby and Alex Ovechkin on Stanley Cup playoff ice. The Blue Jays are making a little magic deep into May and are still in first place. And professional soccer is finally taking root in this country reflecting a complex, multicultural reality.

Beyond all this, the playing fields are alive across the land. Young people are back in the water and on the tracks to someday soon fly Canadian colours on the international stage.

Don't get me wrong, I love hockey and think a seventh NHL franchise in this country would be sweet justice. But I'm not going to dwell on it.

Heck, Canada's going to host the Olympics in nine months! Women ski jumpers are fighting for gender equality and the right to compete at Vancouver 2010. We'll also find out if the Golden Horseshoe's Pan American Games bid has been successful.

The World's fastest man, Usain Bolt, will appear in Toronto and just outside Halifax this summer they'll stage the World Canoe/Kayak championships. There are marathons to be run and swimming races to be won.

So there it is, I applaud Jim Balsillie's quest to plant another team in Canadian soil and redefine the NHL's future. But, in a sporting nation like ours, it's also good to know that the field of play goes well beyond the boards, or indeed boardrooms, of professional hockey.

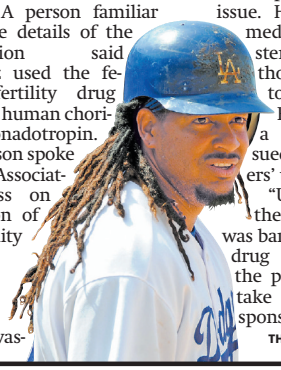
Manny gone for 50 games

Manny Ramirez joined a growing lineup of all-stars linked to drugs Thursday, with the dreadlocked slugger banished by a sport that cannot shake itself free from scandal.

The Los Angeles Dodgers outfielder was suspended for 50 games by Major League Baseball after failing a drug test in spring training, adding a further stamp to what will forever be known as the Steroids Era.

Ramirez said he did not take steroids and was given medication by a doctor that contained a banned substance. A person familiar with the details of the suspension said Ramirez used the female fertility drug HCG, or human chorionic gonadotropin. The person spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the banned substance wasn't announced.



HCG is popular among steroid users because it can mitigate the side-effects of ending a cycle of the drugs. The body may stop producing testosterone when users go off steroids.

Ranked 17th on the career home run list with 533, Ramirez became the most prominent baseball player to be penalized for drugs.

The 36-year-old Ramirez told the Dodgers and fans he was sorry for "this whole situation."

"Recently, I saw a physician for a personal health issue. He gave me a medication, not a steroid, which he thought was OK to give me," Ramirez said in a statement issued by the players' union.

"Unfortunately, the medication was banned under our drug policy. Under the policy that mistake is now my responsibility."

Despite being down 2-1, Penguins remain relaxed

NHL If you were to read the mood, or parse the body language, to guess which team had the upper hand in this sensational playoff series between the Capitals and Penguins, you'd probably be wrong.

It is Washington that is carping about officiating and complaining about the injustice of television networks CBC and Versus stupidly scheduling the next two games on consecutive nights.

And it is Pittsburgh that is almost gleeful in its approach, the Pens players repeatedly talking about how they feel they've outplayed the Capitals in the first three games and, if they just stay the course, they will prevail.

It's as if the Penguins have the Capitals exactly where they want them, trailing 2-1 in the series.

Take the scene in the dressing room of the Penguins' suburban practice facility Thursday, where the team's looseness was palpable. Goaltender Marc-Andre Fleury was holding court with the media, sharing how his teammates teased him about a gaffe that led to Washington's first goal and how, otherwise, they'd shut down Alexander Ovechkin.

"He's got a good shot and it's so accurate. I just try to make myself big," said the netminder of facing Alexander the Great.

So how do you make yourself big?

"Try to eat a lot at McDonald's," said Fleury through a toothy grin.

Compare that to later in the afternoon when the Caps held court at a downtown hotel. As coach Bruce Boudreau groused about the lopsided penalty calls in Game 3, Caps GM George McPhee seethed, waiting for the chance to get his message out.

"I was disappointed with the officiating last night," said McPhee.

Canada reaches semis at world championship

WHC RESULT

Canada 4, Latvia 2

The Canadians were too much for little Latvia to handle at the IIHF World Hockey Championship.

Dan Hamhuis had a goal and an assist Thursday as Canada advanced to the final four at the tournament with a 4-2 quarter-final win. They will play Sweden in Friday's semifinal.

Dany Heatley, Steven Stamkos and Matthew Lombardi also scored for Canada.

Guntis Galvins and Herberts Vasiljevs replied for the Latvians.

The tiny Baltic country is still seeking its first appearance in the semifinals and its first win over Canada at the world championship.

Canada has now guaranteed itself the chance to play for a medal at this event for the seventh straight year.

Demons 'a different beast'

Director Howard dishes on follow-up to record-breaking Da Vinci Code

RICHARD CROUSE
for Metro Canada

Ron Howard, the flame-haired actor turned director of The Da Vinci Code, wasn't surprised by the success of his adaptation of the best selling Dan Brown suspense novel.

"The idea at the centre of The Da Vinci Code was so provocative and such a hot button issue it really lived at the centre of popular culture for almost two years," he said this week in Rome before the premiere of Angels & Demons, the follow-up to the record-breaking Da Vinci Code.

"Angels & Demons is a popular novel," the director says, although he acknowledges that it isn't as notorious as the other book. "What I'm finding, however, is if you like The Da Vinci Code you're going to really like Angels & Demons. I feel like it could be a thrilling and exciting experience for audiences in of itself; separating itself from The Da Vinci Code movie or the novel."

The new film, starring Tom Hanks in a reprise of his Da Vinci role as symbologist Robert Langdon, sees the Harvard professor work to solve a murder, unravel the mystery of an ancient secret brotherhood called the Illuminati and prevent a terrorist act against the Vatican.

The mix of intrigue and religious may sound familiar to Da Vinci Code fans but Howard maintains Angels & Demons is a different beast. "If I felt like it was a cookie cutter situation and I was being asked to repeat myself then it wouldn't interest me," he said, "but I just didn't want to miss this next Robert Langdon adventure.

"I like the uniqueness of these Dan Brown stories. Sure they use the murder mystery genre, but in a way that is so fresh that these films stand on their own as something brand new."

Something that certainly is new in Angels & Demons is the setting. Shot on location in Rome, the movie is a love letter to the Eternal City.

"For scheduling reasons we had to shoot in June," Howard says.

"Everyone in Italy kept saying that we couldn't have chosen a worse month but I'm very glad in a way it was so hectic and intense because it energized everything."

• Angels & Demons opens across Canada next Friday.

Tom Hanks, left, reprises his role as The Da Vinci Code symbologist Robert Langdon in the film adaptation of the Dan Brown novel Angels & Demons. The film is in theatres next week.

Lymelife's nihilism prefab

Lymelife
Director: Derick Martini
Stars: Alec Baldwin, Rory Culkin
Classification: 14A
Rating:

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

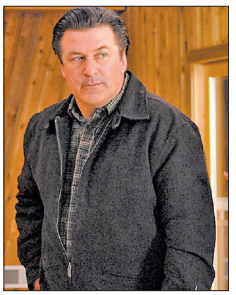
A story of familial dysfunction set at the dawn of the Reagan '80s, Lymelife orbits around Scott Bartlett (Rory Culkin), the moody son of an adulterous dad (Alec Baldwin) and a self-martyring mom (Jill Hennessy).

The Bartletts' unhappiness is hardly atypical: Their Long Island neighbourhood has enough tragic characters for an entire short story collection.

Derick Martini's film (co-written by his brother Steven) works over the terrain of suburban ennui first cultivated by Robert Redford's Ordinary People in 1980, but familiarity is only part of the problem. Despite the presence of some talented actors (including Ordinary People alum Timothy Hutton), Lymelife's various dramatic and visual conceits feel as if they're still trapped on the page.

Lymelife's debt to American Beauty is never more evident than its final scenes, which find one tragically addled character stumbling around, shotgun in hand, while his neighbours are shamelessly arrayed for our delectation as potential victims.

In the end, Lymelife's nihilism feels as tackily prefab as its painstakingly recreated period décor.

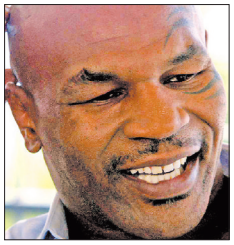


Alec Baldwin plays an adulterous dad in Lymelife.

Tyson must-see portrait of boxer

Tyson
Director: James Toback
Stars: Mike Tyson
Classification: STC
Rating:

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada



The documentary Tyson gets face-to-face with former boxing champ Mike Tyson.

REVIEW Few professional sports figures have commanded as much public vitriol as former heavyweight boxing champ Mike Tyson, to the extent that it's increasingly difficult to recall a time when he was not only respected, but an athlete without peer.

Director James Toback remembers Tyson, fondly (he even gave Tyson a cameo in his 1999 film Black and White), and with his searing same named confessional documentary, he not only celebrates the glorious highs of the former fighter but fully examines every aspect of the tumultuous, often tortured lows, sleazy, blood spattered sensationalism and all.

Sitting down with his subject, Toback jams his lens into Tyson's brutish, tattooed face and just lets the faded titan spill his guts.

From his early, seemingly doomed days on the streets to his salvation at the hands of trainer and father figure Cus D'Mato, to his Olympic and pro-boxing circuit glory right on through his volatile marriage to Robin Givens, from his conviction and prison stint for rape, his relationship to parasitic manager Don King, and right into the sad yet vaguely optimistic present day, Toback's job is a deceivingly simple one: humanize a man that often seems less than human. The results are damned near operatic.

And while that revolting footage of his career-killing 1997 Evander Holyfield ear nibbling fiasco is present as are a myriad of clips depicting Tyson as a savage, salivating, monster, the film absolutely accomplishes its goal.

We get to know Tyson, he creeps under our skin and stays there. We weep for him, laugh with him, laugh at him and sneer at his thuggish, often empty bravado.

For beneath it all, Mike Tyson is just a man, nothing else, as complicated yet simple in his pursuit of happiness as anyone. And this remarkable, eloquent and gripping must-see portrait is absolutely one of the best films of the year.

Toronto's Scott Speedman plays a struggling guardian to the teenage protagonist in Atom Egoyan's Adoration.

All pretension

Adoration

Director: Atom Egoyan
Stars: Scott Speedman, Devon Bostick
Classification: 14A
Rating: ●●

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Somewhere buried within the body of Adoration — the latest tale of damaged lives from Canadian filmmaker Atom Egoyan — is a decent drama about cultural intolerance and its devastating effect on a family.

Shame then that the director's leanings toward self-indulgence steer the story into the realms of hopelessly pretentious twaddle.

Gawky but game young actor Devon Bostick stars as Simon, a Toronto-based teen who, desperately trying to reconcile the conflicting emotions surrounding the death of his mother and Lebanese father, allows his high school French teacher (Egoyan's wife and regular cinematic muse Arsinee Khanjian) to treat a classroom translation exercise as autobiographical.

Detailing the events surrounding his father's failed terrorist martyring of his mother at an Israeli airport, his fictional monologue is soon posted online, causing a massive controversy amongst students, intellectuals and reactionaries alike, much to the chagrin of his haunted guardian and uncle, Tom (Underworld's Scott Speedman).

In traditional Egoyan fashion, Adoration is structured like a Chinese puzzle box, revealing information slowly, methodically and deliberately deceiving the audience.

Some have thrilled to this muddy, convoluted narrative conceit (the film won the Golden Palm prize at Cannes) but it seriously damages the streamline elegance of the story, causing us to focus on the form at the expense of the characters.

Further drawing us out of the heart of the tale is Egoyan's ridiculous and grating stylized realization of online webcam chatrooms, and the outrage such a relatively benign stunt provokes. It's relentless, obnoxious and unnatural, existing in a theatrical artificial void whereas the rest of the picture does not.

On the plus side, Khanjian is typically good in her strange role as manipulative mentor, as is Speedman as the struggling, decent uncle Tom.

Mychael Danna's score is also effective; drenching the picture in slow, sad violins and toney ambience and it's always great to see Toronto play itself onscreen.

But all in all, Adoration is too clever for its own good.

Caine's magic touch

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

FEATURE In his latest movie, Michael Caine plays a cantankerous magician coping with life in a family-run retirement home. At 76, it's the perfect role for the legendary actor — not that he's considering retired life anytime soon.

"A role like this just makes me look forward," said Caine during a recent interview to promote Is Anybody There? "I'm such a forward-looking person and I'm an optimist to the point of being an idiot — I think everything's going to be alright."

It's just that refreshing, disarming attitude that has made Michael Caine one of cinema's most beloved actors on and off-screen for over 50 years. It's also ensured the Oscar-winner a flood of decent new scripts of late. Why, he wouldn't be able to retire if he wanted to.

It seems to be paying off with Is Anybody There? — in theatres next Friday — that has already garnered a ton of praise. But while some critics are calling it, "Caine's best performance in years," the septuagenarian is quick to shirk the attention — instead praising his young co-star Bill Milner (Son of Rambow).

"A role like this just makes me look forward."
Michael Caine on Is Anybody There?

"We had to have a great little boy — otherwise the picture would go in the tube," said Caine of the story's reclusive 11-year old boy whom his character mentors. "When we rehearsed, I realized we'd done well because Bill is a natural movie actor."

According to Caine, much of the credit also belongs to the semi-autobiographical script by Peter Harness.

And Caine should know good scripts. Having starred in 100-plus films — including such Oscar-winners as The Cider House Rules and blockbusters like The Dark Knight — Is Anybody There? lays claim as the only script to have ever caused Caine to shed tears.

"I'm not one of nature's criers, believe me. That's what made me realize it was so special. I thought, 'Bloody hell, I'm sitting in an office, on my own, and I'm crying.' That's astonishing."

Velcrow Ripper's doc Fierce Light hits theatres next week.

Shine a Light on the bright side of life

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

FEATURE Of all the emotions conjured up watching Fierce Light: When Spirit Meets Action, the one that perhaps surprises most critics is just how optimistic it is for a documentary.

"(Documentary filmmakers) have a tendency to really look at things that are going wrong in the world," said director Velcrow Ripper.

"But I always feel like every film has a responsibility to offer us hope because I think we need it so much. I really consider that my responsibility as a filmmaker."

In the thought-provoking movie (in theatres next Friday), Ripper travels the globe searching for the link between activism and spirituality.

It's a touching journey that takes him from a celebrity-endorsed sit-in at the dismantling of an urban farm in L.A. to the historic return visit of exiled Vietnamese monk Thich Nhat Hanh to the South African birthplace of "soul force" — Gandhi's non-violent philosophy of activism.

"For some people the film has actually been life changing," said Ripper, adding that while the film may be optimistic, the audience must earn that sense.

"There are times when the whole audience is in tears during the film and then we bring them out through the other side and give a lot of people a direct taste of soul force.

"To be a documentary filmmaker you have to love humanity, you have to love the planet, you have to have a great sense of curiosity and I never feel like its work for me," said Ripper. "It's always an exciting adventure."

I'm not a boxing fan but I once paid $25 to watch a pay-per-view Mike Tyson fight. It was the mid 1980s and Iron Mike was one of the most famous and controversial men on the planet; a beast who won 26 of his first 28 matches by knockout — 16 in the first round.

Wondering what all the fuss was about I paid my cover charge and watched as the undisputed champ strut into the ring, sized up his opponent and laid him out, unconscious on the floor in less than thirty seconds.

I know $25 for less than a minute of entertainment may sound pricey, but it was a riveting thirty seconds and even now, more than twenty years later, I can remember the look of devastating determination on his face as he massacred his challenger.

It's an expression that runs across his (now tattooed) face several times in the fascinating new documentary Tyson. The film is a raw, revealing look at this troubled but fascinating man.

"It's like a Greek tragedy," he says of the movie, "only I'm the subject."

Tyson is just the latest boxer to get the big screen treatment. Audiences can't seem to get enough of stories about the "sweet science" and the individual struggles of these modern day gladiators.

Everybody knows Rocky, Cinderella Man and Raging Bull but digging a little deeper reveals splendid movies that aren't as well known.

Somebody Up There Likes Me stars Paul Newman (stepping in for James Dean who died just before filming began) as real life middleweight champion of the world Rocky Graziano. The fighter is portrayed as a tough kid from New York's "lower East Side where both sides of the tracks were wrong" whose violent and callous ways are changed by the redemptive power of the love of a good woman.

It sounds a like a mushy love story — and in fact, inspired Sylvester Stallone when he was writing the Adrian storyline in Rocky — but the fight scenes are brutal and authentic.

Also worth a rental is The Great White Hope based on Jack Johnson, (played by Darth Vader himself, James Earl Jones) the first African-American world heavyweight champ, who ruled the ring from 1908 to 1915. Good fight scenes bolster this powerful look at the racial hostility that plagued Johnson's career and it's likely the only boxing movie written in the poetic style of free verse.

"Tyson is just the latest boxer to get the big screen treatment. Audiences can't seem to get enough of stories about the 'sweet science' and the individual struggles of these modern day gladiators."

There are plenty of others; top of my list are Requiem for A Heavyweight and The Harder They Fall. Both are excellent, and both provide way more than thirty seconds of entertainment for your money.

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

4 questions for Ed Westwick

MINA MCGUINNESS
Metro World News

He plays one of the most complex, bow tie-loving characters to have ever hit the small screen.

Yet British-born Ed Westwick opens up about what it's like to play a hurt — not heartless — Chuck Bass on Gossip Girl.

Q What do you love most about your Gossip Girl character Chuck Bass?

A He's complex. He's developing from someone who initially was just a bad boy, to a brat who did as he pleased with all this money and now he's almost at a different place... Chuck is growing as a person. He's someone who's had to wake up and smell the coffee and take a long hard look in the mirror and mature, and, to a certain extent, do it on his own.

Q Do you see Chuck as malicious?

A His non-existent relationship with his father — him having almost no love or affection — manifests itself in this malicious way. It's the key to his character.

Q Let's say he's a hurt character then. What did you do to prepare for the role, to become and think like Chuck?

A I think it was more like a case of picking up on it as the series develops over time. Now I feel like I have a world of knowledge and understanding about him because of what has happened to him. It's all grown organically, and naturally, it's who I am on set.

Q You're actually British, but you fool everyone as you have a pretty good American accent. How do people react to the real you?

A At first, people tend to be shocked. It's funny as one day someone heard me speak on set and they would not accept I was actually English. It's a total fake thing — the whole American accent. It's also a different story when I'm around my friends. The rhythm of my accent may change but not too much.

Ed Westwick plays Chuck Bass on Gossip Girl.

Small screen to big screen

Derek Hough could be adding movie star to his resume. The Dancing With the Stars pro confirms that he could be waltzing into the upcoming Footloose remake. "I haven't auditioned, but I've met with the people," Hough said. EONLINE.COM

TV persona parallels actor

Less Than Kind's Benjamin Arthur is up for a Leo Award for his role as Josh

Leo-nominated actor Benjamin Arthur from TV's Less Than Kind.

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

Actor Benjamin Arthur says there's a lot of himself in his Josh Blecher character on TV's Less Than Kind.

Which is a surprise. Though they are both actors, Josh is also a conceited bully/exhibitionist with little ambition who takes great delight in torturing his younger brother.

"I'm in there, absolutely," says Arthur, 28, whose Less Than Kind role has been nominated for a Leo Award.

"I was preparing for the part for 28 years. But I'm a 'one' normally. And you need to turn the dial up to 10 to play Josh."

Now filming its second season, Less Than Kind is a dark comedy about a dysfunctional Winnipeg family and its perpetually embarrassed teen son Sheldon (Jesse Camacho).

It's Sheldon's poor luck in life to be stuck with a self-destructive criminal dad (Maury Chaykin), and pyromaniac mom (Wendel Meldrum). Then there's brother Josh, whose idea of high comedy is to shake his "junk" in Sheldon's face (which he does in Arthur's Leo-nominated episode).

"Josh runs completely off of bravado and ego. He's pure manic energy," says Arthur.

The actor admits he needed some of that excess energy to stay warm during the making of the first season of Less Than Kind, which was shot in the dead of winter in Winnipeg.

"Last season was ridiculous. I mean, I lived in Kitimat (B.C.), so I'm used to cold. But this was like minus 52 C. You had 55 seconds of shooting before you have to stop or your skin freezes. And I'm there dressed in my torn Josh jeans and V-neck T-shirt."

"I was preparing for the part for 28 years. But I'm a 'one' normally. And you need to turn the dial up to 10 to play Josh."
Actor Benjamin Arthur, Less than Kind

Arthur says his nomination for a Leo Award — given to the best in British Columbian film and television — is a big deal to a guy from Kitimat, though a little bit weird.

"It's for Best Supporting Actor In A Dramatic Series. But I'm in a comedy. So I'm up against actors in serious shows like The Guard. I can see them announcing my nomination by running a clip of me shaking it naked."

• The Leo Awards will be presented this weekend in Vancouver. Reruns of the first season of Less Than Kind air on City TV.

Music

On-demand streams could be next big thing

SoundCheck

For most people, obtaining music involves a transactional experience. I give you money and in exchange, you give me a piece of plastic (a CD, a record, a tape) or access to a digital file (iTunes, eMusic, etc.) At the end of the transaction, I possess (own) a copy of the performance. And it will remain mine until I throw it away or delete it from my hard drive.

But this idea of possessing music is becoming a rather quaint notion. Think about it: If you're able to access whatever song you want from wherever you are at whatever time on any device you choose, why on Earth would you ever need to physically possess a piece of plastic or a digital file?

This is the thinking behind a number of emerging music services that offer on-demand streams. Spotify (a Swedish creation not yet available in Canada) allows users to instantly access specific songs or albums through your computer. Although you need a wired Internet connection now, coders are working on an application for the iPhone, Google's Android platform and Wi-Fi. Spotify is free, but that might change once it's out of beta.

We7 is a U.K. service that does much the same thing with the complete blessing of the major labels. Part of its business model involves running ads that they called "blipverts" before songs.

In both cases, the consumer doesn't have to pay for anything. The value for the music streaming company and its label partners comes from the data they capture from you. By registering with these services, companies know who you are, what you're listening to and what kind of device you're using. Theoretically, this allows them to better target you with recommendations. It also means better targeting for advertisers, but most people don't mind being subjected to ads as long as they're for goods and services in which they might be interested.

The thinking here is twofold: The music "feels" free to the consumer. It's like having the world's biggest hard drive full of music without having to pay for anything — or without it taking up space on the shelf or the hard drive. Second, if you can get all the music you want, it should cut down on piracy.

Will it work? Maybe. We'll see. The digital world is littered with good ideas.

Paul Potts has a plan

British tenor and reality TV champ is back with a new album

BRIAN TOWIE
Metro Canada

Paul Potts has two keys to survival in the spotlight, which he'd like to share with current Britain's Got Talent contestant Susan Boyle: Take it day-by-day, and eat healthy.

The British tenor and 2007 winner of the variety show is great at sticking to the first. The other one? Not so much, but it's something he's trying to change as he jets across the globe in promotion of his second release, Passione. Accompanied by the Czech National Symphony Orchestra, Potts mixes classic operatic numbers and contemporary hits (Procol Harum's A Whiter Shade of Pale is decidedly different when sung in that style).

Though Passione's lineup had to be approved by BGT judge Simon Cowell, Potts had more input this time around into whittling down 60 potential songs onto the 10-track release than on his debut, One Chance.

"I wanted the songs to reflect many different kinds of passion," says the Bristol native and former cellphone store manager. "They're simple tunes, but incredibly beautiful, I think. Some of them are quite a challenge for a tenor to sing, quite rangey, which is what I wanted. We had more time to record it, so we were able to pace it better."

Paul Potts live

- Paul Potts plays the Elgin Theatre on July 18.

And pace is something he'll have to keep up over the next little while as he tours. Noting diabetes runs in the family, Potts says it's important to keep the strict diet that helped him shed six kilograms since January — especially in North America where he says steakhouses abound in comparison to Europe. It's the home-cooking Potts misses the most on the road, a link to normalcy (he gestures quotes with his fingers when he says it) between stints in the bright lights.

"I used to travel on a bike but now I travel here, there and everywhere," he said. "I still do things the way I've always done. I end up doing the shopping at home — my wife hates it — and people come up to me like I'm crazy. They ask me haven't I got someone to do my shopping for me. Well no, why should I? I'd have to make a list and be organized if I did that."

As for a duet with Boyle, his BGT contemporary who became an overnight sensation much like he did two years before, he won't rule it out. Though he doesn't think that far ahead, and he advises her not to either, at least not past a performance.

"I would perform as if nothing's going to happen after it, because otherwise you put a lot of pressure on yourself and you think, 'This could happen, that could happen,'" he said. "You should never concentrate on the What Ifs. You should concentrate on what you have in front of you, right here and now."

Mom doesn't need to know how little you spent.

Ciara's Fantasy Ride

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

If you haven't noticed, life is good for Ciara Harris. But, make no mistake, it's only going to get better.

"I have tons of plans," says the 23-year-old R&B star. "I want to do a lot more when it comes to TV and film. I'm hoping to do action and comedy movies."

The Austin, Texas-born vocalist has already taken the do-everything branding strategy — which other singers like Jennifer Lopez and Britney Spears have mastered — to heart. Ciara's just released Fantasy Ride, her third record, she's joined a renowned modeling agency, she's starred in a host of films, and she runs her own dance company.

Managing her ambitions seems like it would be a full-time job on its own, but Ciara says it's as simple as finding the right balance. "When you have a goal you have to make it all work," she says. "After I'm done touring, that's when I'll do movies."

While it might sound like the soulful singer has her life worked out, she admits that accomplishing everything requires some superhero-like magic. That's one reason why she's developed an alter-ego, the comic book character Super C.

"That's my inner superhero," she explains. "It's my drive to help me overcome obstacles. For relationships to work I have to be strong, that's the Super C in me."

The new album's artwork actually looks and feels like a comic book, but there's no Batman (her favourite character) style brawls here. "My superpower is the power to move you," she says. "My goal is to inspire people through the power of performance and the power to inspire dreams. My story didn't involve me coming from a glamorous life, so I'm here to say where you come from does not determine who you can become."

In addition to releasing her third album (Fantasy Ride) this week, Ciara has joined a renowned modeling agency, starred in a host of films, and runs her own dance company.

"I'm here to say where you come from does not determine who you can become." Ciara

While her comic book hero self does espouse some inspirational messages on Fantasy Ride, it's also evident that Super C likes finding herself in some not so PG-13 situations.

In Love, Sex, Magic, a frenetic pop tune with Justin Timberlake, she sings: "What's your favorite trick that you wanna use on me and I'll volunteer. And I'll be flowing and going till clothing disappears, ain't nothing but shoes on me."

She explains that she tries to write something for everyone, even for her mom, though it's unclear if Mrs. Harris approves of the more sex-drenched tunes on the record.

Still, whether her mom likes it or not, this album is almost guaranteed to be a hit. Besides JT, the disc features appearances by Ludacris, Missy Elliot and the now controversial Chris Brown, while the tunes are just as infectious as anything she's done before.

What's clear from the album and from Ciara's future plans, is that the singer is more self-assured than ever, and that might be the only super power she needs. "I'm getting more and more confident by the day," she says. "I have more wisdom, experience and an understanding of what's going on. And that growth has, more than anything, become a huge part of what I do."

Bif Naked is back

ROB MCMAHON
for Metro Canada

Bif Naked thrives on regimen: The Vancouver-based rocker is up at dawn to exercise and maintains a straightedge lifestyle.

But after her diagnosis for breast cancer in January 2008 and subsequent treatment, that all changed.

"I'm a raw food vegan — I've been doing that a long time — but one month all I wanted was yam rolls, and they're definitely not raw," Naked said, laughing. "To this day, I can barely look at beets. I used to devour beet juice, and ate grated beets on salad every day, but now I can't stand the smell."

Despite these challenges, Naked (real name Beth Torbert) powered through writing and recording a new album. Titled The Promise, the disc is the culmination of months spent with producer, guitarist and "taskmaster" Jason Darr.

Reached a day before the album's release, Naked was recovering from ovarian surgery. But despite a long run of media interviews, the singer was gregarious and upbeat, joking if she hadn't been in the hospital, she would have hit the gym.

The Promise is the new album from Vancouver's Bif Naked. She plays the Mod Club on June 13.

Speaking about chemotherapy, she said the physiological setbacks impacted the recording process, as did ever-changing scheduling.

"Every chemo (treatment) is different — you can't find any consistency," she said. "At one point I was in the hospital for 20 days straight. My larynx gland was so swollen I couldn't swallow ... I was incapacitated for almost a month. Sometimes it seemed like the album would never come to light, but it did, thanks in part to (Jason) Darr, my taskmaster."

The resulting disc features Naked's raw singing, layered over guitar-heavy pop punk. Images of hair falling out (on Amazon Motel) and a song titled Sick may cause fans to automatically reach to recent events for interpretation.

But Naked said the songs are just as rooted in the emotion that powers her creativity: Love. Along with the support of her husband, family, friends and fans, she found love while healing alongside other patients, who became good friends.

"A lot of people will always assume if it's is a sad song, it must be about chemo: 'Oh, here's another sad song, it must be about chemo.' No!" she said. "(Cancer) can be very isolating ... There are a million and one books on cancer, but I think the number one thing as a friend and family member, is to go with that person to chemo, keep them company if they want it, and check up with them every day."

Contact 2009 show a 'Still Revolution'

Whoa. That's the sense every year around this time, as spring blooms and one of the rites of the season — in Toronto, at least — overtakes every corner of the city's visual landscape for a solid month.

The Contact Photography Festival has, over its 13 years, steadily grown into the largest of its kind, anywhere in the world. This year alone, more than 200 exhibitions of every scale are scattered from one end of the city to the other, representing the work of more than 1,000 photographers and amateur enthusiasts.Once a photographic free-for-all, Contact 2009 is a professional affair, with a raft of corporate sponsors, government support, art-world cred and curatorial heft.

"Still Revolution" is the theme this year, as well as the name of the anchor exhibition at the Museum of Contemporary Canadian Art. "I wanted to talk about it in that sense that photography has been revolutionary since the very beginning," festival director Bonnie Rubinstein says.

At MOCCA, Rubinstein and museum director David Liss have assembled an exhibition that touches on photographic revolution in form and content, past, present and future.

From celebrated Vancouver artist Stan Douglas's meticulously reconstructed scene from that city's 1971 Gastown riots — a digital composite of 50 individual photographs — to the simple, warmly kinetic series of Polaroids by Toronto artist Barbara Astman (Dancing with Che,the series is called; in them, Astman dances in a Che Guevara t-shirt, for the benefit of her Polaroid's timed shutter), the show travels the breadth of photographic capability.

Star Trek visits with Vulcans

When the captain of the starship Enterprise met the people of Vulcan at a sneak preview of the new Star Trek movie, he told a story about Spock.

Actor Bruce Greenwood, who plays Capt. Christopher Pike in the latest instalment in the iconic series, recalled choking up on set as hundreds of extras shot to their feet to get a glimpse of Leonard Nimoy, the original Mr. Spock.

"It was incredible," he told the town council of the southern Alberta town that shares a name with Spock's home world.

Greenwood is new to the hype that surrounds the space series, but hundreds of lucky Vulcan residents who won a lottery to get an early look at the new movie are not.

They attached their pointy ears and donned their Starfleet uniforms Wednesday as they beamed onto six buses and boldly set course for Calgary. The sneak peek was arranged after film studio Paramount turned down Vulcan's request to hold the movie's Canadian premiere.

JEFF MCINTOSH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Actor Bruce Greenwood, centre, poses with Dayna Dickens, right, and Erin Melcher, from the Vulcan, Alta., tourism bureau before a sneak preview of Star Trek on Wednesday.

Instead, the studio decided on the advance screening after Nimoy declared it "illogical" to deprive Vulcan of its connection to the flick.

"The town has been just been abuzz with excitement," said Vulcan's tourism co-ordinator as residents flashed Vulcan salutes and Romulans grabbed popcorn and swapped costume tips with Klingons in spiky suits.

"I'm thrilled, I'm absolutely ecstatic to see this kind of support, especially from local residents to this Star Trek theme that we're so passionate about."

Jaymz Smith, clad in a scarlet captain's uniform, said the movie signals new beginnings. "It means a brand new chapter in Star Trek history, a reboot for the franchise and possibly, I'm hoping, really, really hoping, a new level of popularity and a whole new generation who will come to enjoy what I enjoy."

Several town residents admitted they weren't huge fans, but said they were so caught up in the excitement around the film they were willing to give it a try.

"We just couldn't miss out on the fun. People were jealous because we got to come."
Doreen Orr

Doreen Orr and Ruth Richardson made it through 73 years without seeing a Star Trek movie, but they dutifully donned their Spock ears and blue science-officer uniforms before boarding the bus.

Asked if they're Star Trek fans, Richardson said: "We're going to be."

"We just couldn't miss out on the fun," added Orr. "People were jealous because we got to come.

While the 11th Star Trek film could be seen in some theatres yesterday, it officially opens in North America on Friday.

Scrubs finale leaves room for resurrection

SERIES Scrubs creator Bill Lawrence is glad to reminisce about the plucky sitcom that survived years of time slot upheaval and a transplant from one network to another.

At this point, however, the discussion is akin to talking in the past tense about a hospital patient who is still working through the Jell-O course. In other words, Scrubs isn't a goner yet.

ABC may yet decide to give the show, or some incarnation of it, a spot on the network's 2009-10 schedule to be announced later this month. After all, ABC did rescue Scrubs after NBC dropped it last year, and the sitcom is produced by ABC Studios.

So Lawrence devised a season-closer this Wednesday which could also serve as the show's final curtain.

It was an approach built around the departures of series star Zach Braff and Lawrence himself from the world of Sacred Heart Hospital.

"It's my last year and Zach's last year, so the finale is exactly what we would have written as a series finale. And if it goes forward, it's still what we would have written as Zach's finale," Lawrence said.

A key question: What happens with erratic lovebirds J.D. (Braff) and Elliot (Sarah Chalke)?

JEFF MCINTOSH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

There's been talk that some of the actors, including Zach Braff, may return on occasion if Scrubs is renewed.

Lawrence can imagine a ninth season for Scrubs, even if it loses cast members to other projects. After all, the show was first pitched as a comic version of ER, able to accommodate new faces as the years passed.

There's been talk that some of the actors, including Braff, may return on occasion if the show is renewed. As for Lawrence, his Cougar Town pilot starring Courteney Cox is under consideration by ABC.

But, he said, "I don't think there can ever be a show called Scrubs that I wouldn't at least check in on."

It's been a memorable and instructive ride, Lawrence said.

"What was liberating about it was you stop trying to write things for everyone and make the people laugh who already liked the show — and, believe it or not, it's a lot easier to do," he said.

Fawlty Towers: 30 years later

CLASSIC They don't make 'em like they used to. Bunch of money-chasing idiots. Not like in my day!

Sounding rather like an inn keeper on a short fuse, John Cleese reminisced Wednesday about making Fawlty Towers, back in the epoch he remembers as television's golden age.

"I don't think the writers work as hard as they used to, and I think they may lack experience because I don't think the writing is as good as it used to be," said Cleese, who wrote the classic comedy series with Connie Booth, who was then his wife. "But I do proudly say that in the '60s, '70s and '80s we did have the least bad television in the world, and that's quite a claim. I think the main problem now is it's run on the basis of money."

Cleese was reunited with Booth, Prunella Scales (Sybil Fawlty) and Andrew Sachs (Manuel) at an event to publicize an upcoming 30th anniversary documentary on the making of Fawlty Towers. Cleese recalled submitting the first script to Jimmy Gilbert at the British Broadcasting Corp. Gilbert responded that the script was "full of cliched situations and stereotypical characters, and I cannot see it as being anything other than a disaster," Cleese said.

Picasso, Giacometti works fetch US$7.7 million each

ART Pieces by Pablo Picasso and Alberto Giacometti sold Wednesday for more than US $7 million each at an auction of impressionist and modern art, showing that collectors still are willing to spend despite the global recession, the Christie's auction house said.

The 1971 Picasso painting Woman with Hat was consigned by film director Julian Schnabel to help finance a real estate project. It shows a female figure with a face reminiscent of the artist. It sold for $7.7 million, just below its pre-sale estimate.

Schnabel, who was nominated for an Oscar for The Diving Bell and the Butterfly, bought it from Picasso's grandson, and it has hung in his Manhattan home and studio since 1989. Picasso selected the canvas for a solo exhibition in Avignon, France, in 1973, but he died a month before it opened. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Emulating Anne's charm

Director knew Amy Wallis was right for part after her audition

When you've spent the last four years of your relatively short life alternating between playing one of Disney's most beloved heroines and one of Canada's most revered literary figures, you might think it could turn a young lady's head.

But, judging from a recent conversation, Amy Wallis is doing just fine in the modesty department with none of the arrogance that both her onstage prototypes — Anne Shirley and Belle — have sometimes displayed.

Wallis, 26, is beginning her fourth season as the title character in that best known of all Canadian musicals, Anne of Green Gables. What makes this time around even more special for her is that the show is being performed at the Elgin Theatre, courtesy of Dancap Productions.

"I'm incredibly excited to be appearing in the city that I hope to build a career in," says Wallis. "I really want to do well here."

The chances are that she will. The reviews from her first three summers as Anne have all been glowing — the same kind of response in her native Vancouver, where she's starred for the past four Christmases in the Arts Club Theatre's production of Beauty and the Beast.

"Mom and dad didn't want me to go into theatre at all," she laughs.

VINCE TALOTTA/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Amy Wallis stars in new Dancap theatre production of Anne of Green Gables at the Elgin Theatre.

Wallis's parents Valerie Easton and Ray Wallis are both former actors. Now, Easton is a noted choreographer while Wallis has a career in financial planning.

"They tried to get me interested in sports, but all I wanted to do was perform. I would force my parents to watch me put on these long, involved plays I had created when I was only four. I was always running around doing numbers from Cats and driving them crazy."

By this point, Wallis's father had quit show business "cold turkey," in his daughter's words, and was enjoying working in the financial sector.

"Dad would try to get me interested in the things he was doing," Wallis confesses, "and I would just stare at him with drool coming down from my mouth. I was such a Broadway baby!"

But the Wallis family still held the line, making sure Amy would have something approaching a normal existence. "I got very involved in high school drama," shares Wallis, "and so I asked my mother if I could have an agent. She said `no.' It was okay if went to dance classes and acted in community theatre, but she wanted me to have a real life."

Eventually she spent a few years at York University, but dropped out, feeling that "I was ready and I knew what I wanted."

After a year on a cruise ship ("just so I could see the world"), she wound up in her old hometown and got her first professional job as Anybodys in the Arts Club Theatre production of West Side Story.

Since then, she's kept busy across the country in various shows, but there's no doubt in her mind that the cherry on the sundae has been playing Anne Shirley.

"I flew out to Toronto to audition for it," she remembers, "and I had no idea how I did at first. I wanted the part so badly! I had read the books as a little girl and the first song I ever sang at a concert was `Gee, I'm Glad I'm No One Else But Me.'"

Beckhams sticking around
It turns out that those reports about the Beckhams moving to Milan were false. Victoria tells Entertainment Tonight that the family is staying put in Los Angeles. "The rumours aren't true. We aren't moving," she says. METRO WORLD NEWS

Hockey:
Talk of a possible seventh NHL team coming to Canada this week — with co-CEO of Research In Motion's Jim Balsillie wanting to bring the Phoenix Coyotes to Ontario — likely had a few people reminiscing about Canada's storied game. Here's a primer on Canada and hockey:

- A few years ago, CBC Television unveiled its 10-part documentary series Hockey: A People's History, chronicling all the slapshots and fouls from the game's history. Visit cbc.ca/hockeyhistory for more details. There is also Guy Madden's award-winning My Winnipeg, which includes a chapter on the Winnipeg Jets' history in the Manitoban capital.
- For a lighter hockey experience, rent the classic Paul Newman movie Slap Shot, Rob Lowe's 1986 Youngblood — about a young player trying to get the attention of hockey scouts — or Luck, about a down-on-his-luck Canadian who takes to gambling during the Canada-Russia hockey series in 1972. The series is also highlighted in the two-part CBC miniseries called Canada Russia 72.
- Musically, The Tragically Hip's song Fireworks also touches on the '72 series and the eruption that took place after Paul Henderson's "goal that everyone remembers." And no hockey list would be complete without Stompin' Tom's The Hockey Song.
- Roch Carrier's children's book The Hockey Sweater is a classic of Canadian literature, and it's National Film Board cartoon-version has been seen by kids and adults for decades. Only a story about hockey could double as an allegory for French-English relations.
- Hockey in art? You bet. Graeme Patterson, a 2009 Sobey Art Award finalist, has used hockey in a number of his sculptures. They including Hockey Organ — a souped-up rod-hockey game where instead of pulling rods to make the players move, you press organ keys, which in turn play music — and Ten Point Game — a sculptural/video installation highlighting Darryl Sittler's 10 point game in 1976. Shania is Hello! beauty queen

In its inaugural "most beautiful" ranking, Hello! Canada has honoured country singer Shania Twain with the title of Canada's Most Beautiful Woman.

"Pop-country singing sensation Shania Twain, 43, is self-effacing when it comes to her undeniable beauty," says the magazine.

"I don't think I'm ugly, I just think I'm overrated on the cutie factor," she says. But for the stunner, who has been the face of the cosmetic giant Revlon, feeling good is the key to looking great. "I like to feel like a woman," she says. "I feel sexy in a plain white T-shirt with nothing underneath."

"I don't think I'm ugly, I just think I'm overrated on the cutie factor."
Shania Twain

On newsstands now, the new issue of the magazine pays tribute to the most beautiful the country has to offer — including TV and movie stars, politicians, royalty, musicians and athletes.

Some other Canadians who made Hello's Most Beautiful list include Dr. Ruby Dhalla, Kiefer Sutherland, Kim Cattrall, Evangeline Lilly, The Four Tenors, and 90210 stars Shenae Grimes, Jessica Lowdes, Dustin Milligan and Jason Priestley.

Wolverine's Canadian, who knew?

MOVIES A funny thing happened to Wolverine on his way to box office supremacy last weekend: His Canadian origins became a punchline for reviewers.

X-men Origins: Wolverine, starring Hugh Jackman as the Canadian mutant hero, survived mediocre reviews to gross more than $85 million (U.S.) and critics seemed to find the brooding character's Canuck background irresistible.

"A grouchy, sensitive loner with retractable metal claws and apparently unretractable facial hair, Wolverine brooded and growled through the first three X-Men pictures," writes A.O. Scott in the New York Times. "And now X-Men Origins: Wolverine … helps explain just what makes this guy so intriguing and unusual. He's Canadian."

"X-Men Origins: Wolverine … helps explain just what makes this guy so intriguing and unusual. He's Canadian."
A.O. Scott of the New York Times

Hollywood Reporter critic Kirk Honeycutt writes: "Six years later, Logan (Jackman) is a lumberjack in a remote Canadian forest, though the film never clarifies whether becoming Canadian represents another mutation."

Grady Hendrix's take on Slate.com, subtitled "How a ridiculous Canadian mutant conquered the world," examines the character's origins as a "mostly Canadian caricature." But he manages a compliment for our homegrown hero. "Like all wildly successful figures in American entertainment, Wolverine is a Canadian."

Initially many fanboys worried that Wolverine's Canadian background would be left out of the American-made films. So how does Wolverine fare in terms of Canadian-ness? Probably the most definitive point is when Col. William Stryker attempts to lure him back into a violent secret strike force, saying, "Your country needs you." Wolverine turns him down, responding: "I'm Canadian."

Fashion Show takes over for Runway

BRAVO Generally speaking, a fashion show and a runway go hand in hand. But for TV audiences, they'll now be rivals.

Bravo is debuting The Fashion Show on Friday to fill the void left by Project Runway, which bolted to rival Lifetime. Bravo recruited designer Isaac Mizrahi, singer Kelly Rowland and IMG Fashion vice-president Fern Mallis, the force behind much of New York Fashion Week, for its new reality show.

There are a few tweaks to The Fashion Show, which debuts Friday: Each week a winning garment is to be manufactured and sold to the public via an online store; all the designers are professionals; and the winner at the end of the season will have his or her own line available at retail.

However, the similarities to the Heidi Klum-helmed show are striking, too. There are few fashion personalities who could rival the wit and openness of Michael Kors, but Mizrahi probably can. Rowland brings the celebrity element to the show, and Mallis probably has had her share of front-row catwalk seats next to Nina Garcia.

And there is, of course, the weekly challenge.

There's room for multiple fashion-themed reality shows because it's an industry that average Joes and Janes are mesmerized by and understand, says Mizrahi, who didn't name his obvious competitor. The sixth season of Project Runway — which has already been taped — will air this summer on Lifetime.

"As a judge, I am looking first for integrity. I can't tell yet about niches that people will fit into, but we have to train them to think properly and then think about the marketplace aspect. The difference with our show from other shows is that we have an audience that votes every week and they say some brutal things," Mizrahi says.

Rowland is looking for a spark — and an outfit she'd wear — among the 15 participants, while Mallis says she is eyeing both creativity and practicality. "You have to be able to walk in it, step up a step in it," Mallis says.

Rowland thinks it's the judges' collective perspective that will benefit the wannabe style stars the most.

"We're all very honest," she says. "Firm Fern and Honest Isaac, that's what I call them."

Apple Cider made me lose 16 pounds!

Monique was looking for a healthy way to lose weight and tried Apple Cider 600. She lost 16 pounds in 6 weeks!

"I work night shifts in the health care sector. It's a hard schedule and it made me gain a lot of weight - about 25 pounds. Even if I exercised, I never lost weight. Especially my legs felt very heavy. It was frustrating!

My local pharmacy advised me to take Apple Cider 600, in order to lose fat and retained water. I bought a few boxes and started the diet."

I finally lost weight from my legs!

"Apple Cider 600 worked great. After 6 weeks my weight went from 153 lbs to 137 lbs. And I finally lost weight from my legs – lots of weight! I didn't exercise but I was not snacking and I did drink a lot of water, as recommended.

I highly recommend Apple Cider 600 to anyone who would like to lose weight safely. This product works! I am thrilled with my new body!"

Monique, Quebec City

ARE YOU RETAINING WATER?	YES	NO
My body feels heavy and puffy	■	■
I love especially salty snacks	■	■
My joints feel swollen	■	■
I have cellulite	■	■
My clothes are tight	■	■
I don´t drink enough water	■	■

These are some clues that your body is retaining more than usual amounts of water. Cut your salt intake and try Apple Cider 600 as a solution!

SO HOW CAN APPLE CIDER 600 HELP?

Apple Cider 600 is an effective formula of three plant extracts, combined to make you slim down in a healthy and natural way. Apple cider vinegar has traditionally been used to stimulate metabolism and balance digestion. Globe artichoke stimulates your bodies detox process and Dandelion is a strong diuretic, which for decades has been used to eliminate retained fluids, stored among the fat cells and soft tissue.

WATER RETENTION MAKES YOU BLOAT!!

Weight loss is not only about losing fat. Water retention also makes you feel overweight and bloated. Your fingers swell, your ankles feel heavy and pants fit tighter. What is the cause? For most of us, we are simply victims of high-sodium processed foods and salty snacks. But women are additionally at risk for water retention, doctors say, because of the rise and fall of hormone levels.

The Boss still delivers

Springsteen keeps things upbeat at ACC

Bruce Springsteen & The E Street Band

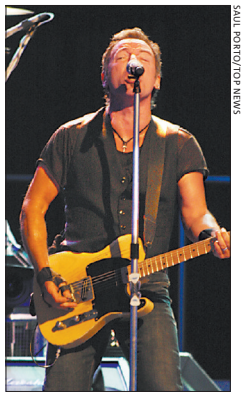
Venue: Air Canada Centre
Rating: ●●●½

KEITH CARMAN
for Metro Canada



SAUL PORTO/TOP NEWS

Bruce Springsteen performs Thursday night at the Air Canada Centre.

ConcertReview
music@metronews.ca

MTV may be pitting Bruce Springsteen against dubious competition on the silver screen — his title track for The Wrestler is battling Hannah Montana for Best Song From A Movie in the station's upcoming cinematic awards show.

But when it comes to laying it bare on the stage, neither Miley Cyrus nor her achy breaky father can hold a candle to the legendary rocker/singer/songwriter and his equally-impressive E Street Band.

Nothing less than a spectacular extravaganza of dynamics, grace and musicianship, this solitary Canadian stop of The Boss' current Working on a Dream tour was a humbling treat for Torontonians. Far from raucous yet undeniably high-spirited, Springsteen and crew were enthusiastic to the point of excess; spurred on to sweat by the bucketful and engaging in grandiose gestures thanks to a mutually infectious energy from crowd and band alike. Springsteen lived every second of this performance as if it were his last.

Kicking in with a rousing rendition of Badlands, through No Surrender and a monologue-heavy breakdown during Working on a Dream, it was compelling to experience what truly is the greatest and biggest bar band in the world.

And that comes even during a first half that leaned heavily towards Boss-savvy fans. From lengthy epic Outlaw Pete and Johnny 99 to The Ghost Of Tom Joad, this part of the night was certainly not culled from his radio-friendly chart toppers. Still, it rocked solidly even if moments were a touch long-winded and anti-climactic.

As for The Boss' highly-touted show gimmick "sign time" where he picks fan posters calling to perform rare tunes, more thought was put into it than most would expect. He eventually pulled out E Street Shuffle and Louie Louie, both hardly shockers. Again, though, they were seamless and upbeat.

Still, it wasn't until the second half that band and audience were invigorated; treated to the classic Boss tunes we all know, love and respect. While it seemed strange at first that in a two-plus hour gig, Springsteen would save his hits for the end as opposed to sprinkling them throughout, one could see how the first set was clearly in favour of diehards and the band themselves, the latter for everyone to partake in.

That way, everyone left sated, elated and in full adoration of The Boss, thereby justifying his decades-old nickname.

Spring comes to cottage country

Spa opening kicks off the new season up north

Both spas and spring are all about renewal, so the two make for a perfect pairing. Luckily, a new spa has just opened in cottage country — Spa Rosseau, which is part of The Rosseau, a hotel that iteself launched in December.

The ambience of Spa Rosseau incorporates Muskoka elements such as birch, rock, wind and water; guests are also treated to views overlooking Lake Rosseau.

To celebrate the opening, Spa Rosseau is offering special introductory packages for two, starting at $343 per night plus taxes and fees, until May 15. These packages include overnight accommodation in a luxurious studio (each room has a fireplace, galley kitchen and an oversize bathroom); buffet breakfast for two at Cottages restaurant, where the sunrise fills the room; and two 50-minute treatments at Spa Rosseau. For more details, visit sparosseau.com.

SPA ROSSEAU

The whirlpool at the newly-opened Spa Rosseau offers a panoramic view out over the lake.

Briars to the rescue

If you can't have Mayan ruins as the backdrop to your wedding, consider Lake Simcoe instead. The Briars Resort and Spa, at Jackson's Point, Ont., says it's ready to help couples whose destination wedding plans have been cancelled by the outbreak of Influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, in Mexico. The Briars is offering special emergency

Northern site

As part of a government initiative to boost tourism in northern Ontario, a new web portal has been launched to showcase the region's offerings. The site is northernontario.travel, and while it's a little clunky at the moment, it offers good potential as a resource for travellers looking to plan trips up north.

Moose watching

Spring is one of the best times of the year to see moose and deer before the foliage in cottage country fills in.

And Algonquin Provincial Park happens to be a great spot for spring moose watching — it's not unusual to see moose browsing beside the roads in the Highway 60 corridor, according to travel website 400eleven.com.

For more information on accommodations and day or weekend trips in the area, take a look at the park's website, algonquinpark.on.ca, or 400eleven.com/algonquin-area.html.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

This May 18, 2008 photo shows spring bursting into bloom at the Royal Botanical Gardens Arboretum in Burlington, Ont. The RBG is a great place to take mom this weekend.

Bloomin' marvellous

• Instead of giving mom a bouquet on Sunday — you remembered that's Mother's Day, right? — why not take her to the Royal Botanical Gardens in Burlington, Ont., where she'll get to enjoy more spring flowers than she can shake a stick at. It's Tulip Celebration time at the RBG, which means colourful bulb displays will be on offer. If you want to check out the different garden areas (a shuttle bus is available) then walking shoes are probably a good idea. The RBG Centre and all outdoor gardens are open daily from 10 a.m. to dusk. Admission is free for members; $10 for adults; $7 for seniors/student/youth; $5 for children age five to 12; free for children under five; $25 for a family of two adults and two children under five. See rbg.ca for more.

Buy mom lunch

• In addition to the spring blooms, the RBG has a couple of events on this weekend. If you want to treat mom to a Mother's Day meal, make reservations at the RBG Centre for one of three seatings on Sunday, May 10 — 10 a.m., noon or 2 p.m. The meal includes "spectacular food stations prepared by Pepperwood Catering and Special Events, cash bar, free admission to the gardens, and free shuttle to the Rock Garden and the Tulip Celebration." Reservations are required; call 905-527-1158, ext. 513 to book. Prices for RBG members are $34 for adults/seniors, $17 for children. For non-members, the cost is $40 for adults/seniors and $20 for children.

Or, buy her some plants

• If mom is an avid gardener herself, consider taking her to the RBG on Saturday, May 9 for the RBG Auxiliary Plant Sale, on at the Arboretum on Old Guelph Road from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Many rare and beautiful plants go on sale to the public at this popular fundraiser; master gardeners and plant experts will also be on hand to offer advice. But you'd better be an early bird if you want to get the best selection. Lists of the plants available for sale are posted at rbg.ca.

'I won't know this world without her'

TRUE LOVE In an exclusive interview with People, an emotional and often teary-eyed Ryan O'Neal spoke for the first time about the devastating illness of his longtime partner, Farrah Fawcett, who has battled cancer for the past two and a half years.

"It's a love story. I just don't know how to play this one. I won't know this world without her," O'Neal, 68, says of his current role as caretaker. "Cancer is an insidious enemy."

GETTY IMAGES

O'Neal also revealed for the first time how the anal cancer long ago spread to other parts of Fawcett's body, including her liver.

"She stays in bed now. The doctors see that she is comfortable. Farrah is on IVs, but some of that is for nourishment," he explains. "The treatment has pretty much ended."

Fawcett, 62, herself tells of her journey through illness in Farrah's Story a two-hour NBC documentary she shot with pal Alana Stewart that airs May 15.

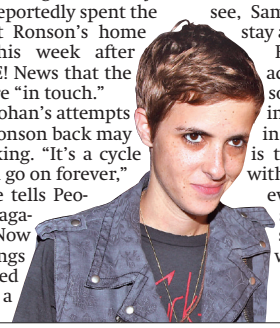
Heart yes, mind no: Sam

INDECISION Lindsay Lohan and Samantha Ronson may be reconciling, sources say. Lohan reportedly spent the night at Ronson's home early this week after telling E! News that the two were "in touch."

And Lohan's attempts to get Ronson back may be working. "It's a cycle that can go on forever," a source tells People magazine. "Now that things have died down a little and Lindsay is behaving herself and showing Sam what she wants to see, Sam's strength to stay away eases up."



But the source adds that Ronson is still resisting. "Sam knows in her head, life is truly better off without Lindsay — even if her heart sometimes says otherwise."

Sarah Jessica's wild surrogate

IS THAT HEREDITARY? Michelle Ross, reportedly the surrogate mother for Matthew Broderick and Sarah Jessica Parker, has a bit of a wild past, according to Star magazine.

Her ex-husband, Joe Erker, tells the magazine that Ross is bisexual — and even has a tattoo on her wrist proclaiming it.

Ross herself even admits she has a wild side. "I have had pink hair and tattoos and spiked collars," Ross tells the magazine. "My favourite shoes are five-inch black spike heels, which lace up the front."

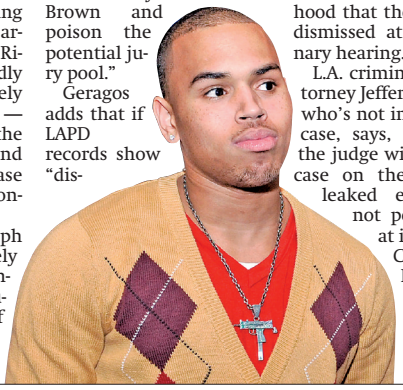
Legal loophole for Chris?

LEGAL EAGLE Chris Brown's legal team is on the move, people.com reports.

The singer's lawyer, Mark Geragos, filed a request in a Los Angeles court Wednesday seeking access to LAPD records, arguing that photos of Rihanna's injuries, allegedly at Brown's hand — widely distributed on the Web — was "illegally leaked to the media" by police and may result in a case dismissal, radaronline.com reports.

"The photograph was immediately viewed by hundreds of thousands of viewers and was displayed on every news channel for several weeks," Geragos states. "The purpose of the leak was necessarily for profit and to vilify Mr. Brown and poison the potential jury pool."



Geragos adds that if LAPD records show "dishonest conduct" by its officers, "I intend to use such evidence at the preliminary hearing to attack their credibility ... I believe there is a reasonable likelihood that the case will be dismissed at the preliminary hearing."

L.A. criminal defence attorney Jeffery Rubenstein, who's not involved in the case, says, "It's unlikely the judge will dismiss the case on the grounds of leaked evidence. It's not police conduct at issue here, it's Chris Brown's."

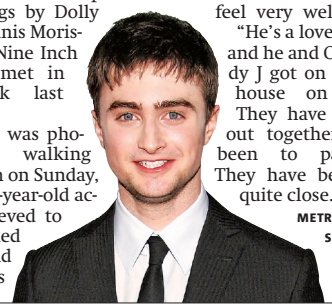
Dan's new drag queen BFF

UNLIKELY PAIR Daniel Radcliffe has befriended a drag queen, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The Harry Potter star has been spotted enjoying several dinners with Our Lady J, a transvestite who performs songs by Dolly Parton, Alanis Morissette and Nine Inch Nails he met in New York last year.

The pair was photographed walking arm-in-arm on Sunday, and the 19-year-old actor is believed to have formed a close bond with his new pal.



A close friend of Our Lady J told Britain's The Sun newspaper: "Daniel is fascinated by the drag culture and is always asking questions. He went to a few shows and was made to feel very welcome. "He's a lovely guy and he and Our Lady J got on like a house on fire. They have eaten out together and been to parties. They have become quite close."

Kiefer's head-butting has consequences

PROBATION PROBLEM Kiefer Sutherland was charged with assault after he allegedly head-butted a man at a party in New York on Tuesday, and now authorities in Los Angeles may come down harder on him, people.com reports.

Sutherland, who's currently serving a five-year probation term in Los Angeles for his second DUI conviction, may have violated those terms, which clearly state the actor must "obey all laws."

Sutherland — who surrendered to police yesterday — allegedly came to the defence of actress Brooke Shields after Jack McCollough reportedly bumped into Shields.

"Our office intends to contact the NYPD and New York prosecutors to review the incident and determine whether Mr. Sutherland violated probation," L.A. City Attorney spokesman Frank Mateljan tells People. A probation violation often means a return to jail. Sutherland previously spent 48 days in jail on his second DUI conviction.

MJ sued by own spokeswoman

SOME LOYALTY Michael Jackson is facing more legal trouble, this time from within his own camp. His spokesperson Raymone Bain is suing him $44 million owed for her work, according to Hollyscoop. "Mr. Jackson has elected not to honour the financial obligations of our contractual relationship, despite my numerous attempts to amicably resolve this matter," Bain said.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Stuffed Rissoles

INGREDIENTS:

1 lb (500 g) lean ground beef
3.8-oz (110-g) bottle or package hamburger seasoning mix
1 tbsp (15 ml) Worcestershire sauce
1 tbsp (15 ml) tomato sauce
salt and freshly ground black pepper
1/2 cup (125 ml) grated cheddar
1 tbsp (15 ml) canola oil

TO SERVE:

Tomato sauce

METHOD:

1. Put meat, hamburger seasoning, Worcestershire sauce, tomato sauce and salt and freshly ground black pepper into bowl. Knead mixture until well combined. Cover with plastic wrap and let stand 5–10 minutes.
2. Divide mixture into four; shape each portion into flat patty. Using thumb, make deep hole in centre of each patty, taking care not to push all the way through.
3. Place a quarter of cheese into centre of each patty, then mould meat over to cover cheese. If necessary, press flat.
4. Heat oil in large frying pan. Add patties and cook over moderate heat until cooked through, 5–7 minutes per side. Serve with tomato sauce.
